

5 NBC CHICAGO NEWSLETTERS | SEND PICS | TIPS 81° Search

HOME NEWS WEATHER INVESTIGATIONS ENTERTAINMENT SPORTS TRAFFIC CONTACT US WATCH LIVE TV NOW f t g+

LOCAL U.S. & WORLD SPORTS HEALTH WEATHER BLOGS: WARD ROOM WORTH THE TRIP MADHOUSE ENFORCER GRIZZLY DETAIL

Illinois Man Suing Ashley Madison Wants to Be Able to Keep Using Website

The lawsuit asks the company that owns Ashley Madison to encrypt the man's personal information so he can continue using the site without the fear that it will be released again

View Comments (1) | Email | Print Tweet 6 Recommend 185 Send G+ 3

Updated at 5:36 PM CDT on Tuesday, Sep 1, 2015

An Illinois man has filed a lawsuit against the cheating website Ashley Madison because he wants to be able to continue using the site after hackers publicly released personal and financial information of millions of members.

Matthew Lisuzzo filed the lawsuit on Tuesday, according to his attorney, Thomas A. Zimmerman, Jr. of Zimmerman Law Offices, P.C.

DEVELOPING Manhunt Underway After Officer Fatally Shot in Fox Lake

The lawsuit asks Avid Life Media, Inc., the owner of Ashley Madison, to close the access portals used by the hackers to obtain members' personal information and to encrypt Lisuzzo's personal information so he can continue using the site without the fear that it will be released again, according to Zimmerman.

"Ashley Madison members have protectable privacy rights to keep their personal and financial information private, and a constitutional right to associate with other people in a confidential manner," Zimmerman said.